The Moors make extensive use of spirit prepared from the water in which comb is boiled in treating beeswax The water, being impregnated with honey, is allowed to ferment, and is then distilled; the spirit is called maharga. It is flavored with anise seed or with naffa-that is, fennel acid.

For many years past a California farmer's land was being gradually reduced in size by the encroachments of a river upon which it borders. Recently, however, the stream began to recede, and at last accounts the soil-tiller had regained all the lost land and much more, too, and the waters were still going out.

Jenkins Junior quarreled with Jen kins Senior in a crowded dining-room in brankfort, Ky., and the father threw a glass at his son's head, whereupon the son promptly drew his pistol and fired at his sire. No further harm was done but the old man seemed to be rather proud of his boy. "He did right," said he to a friend. "He's a Jenkins, you know-spirited, high strung. That's the way he was raised. If a man threw a glass at my head, I suppose I'd have to kill him. Yes, the boy did right."

A distinguished Brahmin recently quoted from official reports the statement that 80,000,000 of the Hindus are always in a state of semi-starvation; that most of the dis eases are the result of hunger; that 3,000,000 or 4,000,000 die every eleventh year of acute famine. Over a large portion of China famine is chronic. Only a few years ago 7,000,000 starved to death in one visitation.

It consists of two parts, or envelopes. The first, next to the body, is of a rubber material. The second is of mole-skin. The two parts are connected by a curious head-piece which also protects the face and admits the necessary air. The space between the envelopes is filled with fresh water, which is also admitted at the head-piece, and prevents burning.

Interview with Gov. Andrew G. Curtin: I was disappointed in Martin Irons. He made a miserable appearance on the witness-stand, bore himself badly, was the reverse of frank, and crossed himself an innumerable number of times. He is evidently a fellow of no particular brains, and it is a mystery how he holds his position with the order. The contrast between him and such a man as Powderly is marked in the extreme. Powderly is a gentleman of brains and culture, and a reasoner and thinker in every sense of the word. He is not to be mentioned in connection with such a man as Martin Irons.

The whalebone whales differ from others in their absence of teeth. At an early stage of their development they are present, but disappear and are re-placed in the male by the baleen or whalebone of commerce. This whale bone-that in the right whale often weighs from 1,000 to 1,500 pounds—is a strainer or trap by which the animal obtains its food, which consists of minute pelagic animals, jelly fishes, etc. The whale opens its mouth as it moves along, and when it is filled closes it, the water finding its way out between the plates of whale that serve as a com plete trap or sieve.

A Bordeaux journal describes the dinner usually provided for workmen in that city. A large plate of vegetable soup costs 2 cents; a large piece of bread 2 cents; a large plate of red haricot beans costs 2 cents; half a plate of roast veal (the quantity being ample for an ordinary man) costs 4 cents; a plate of rice 1 cent, and half a bottle of vin ordinaire costs 4 cents; so it will be seen a fair dinner was provided, with half a bottle of wine included, for 15 cents. What can be made a successful business in France, where almost every article of diet is taxed, can surely be made to pay here, where food and meat

One of the strangest communities in the world lives on the Island of Redonda, which is one of the British West Indies, between Nervis and Montserrat. It is very rocky and barren, and contains no vegetation, but has extensive mines of phosphate of alumina and iron. About fifty men work in these mines they being the only persons on the island with the exception of the foreman's wife. Their provisions have to be brought from Nevis and Montserrat in small boats. The men live in small, wooden huts built for the purpose The climate of Redonda is beautiful and healthful, and the workmen enjoy perfect health. The harbor is excellen and well protected, the highest point on the island being 1,000 feet above the level of the sea.

If you ask almost any saloonkeeper what bock-beer is, he will tell you without hesitation that he doesn't know, but that there is no extra charge for drinking it. Other saloon-men, however, affirm that all there is of it is that more malt and hops are used, and that one glass of bock will cause the deadly effect that two glasses of ordinary beer would—this being a clear saving of tive cents every drink. Others again claim that the warm spring weather makes the beer become bock; and still others that the difference rests entirely with the colored lithographs in the windows representing a goat going it. Finally, it is claimed that book-beer is brewed to celebrate the invention of beer, some time about the year I. NATURAL HISTORY.

What a Man With an Inquiring Mind Ob-Lack of opportunity is often given as an excuse for either common, ordinary aziness, sometimes indolence of body and often torpor of mind. Men who had rather have their wives or families support them than reverse the order, complain that they can find nothing to They hunt work by sitting along the river banks in summer and lounging in saloons in winter.

About the best instance of lack of opportunity lately heard of is that of a tramp who applied for food at a house one August, saying that he would like to work at his trade, but "hadn't got no chance." When quizzed as to the nature of his trade, he replied: "Shovel-

There are numerous people who would like to follow up some study, often merely as a pastime, but who offer the same old excuse, no opportunity. "I would like very much to study botany, geology, mineralogy, or natural history, but there is no chance to carry it on in town." They further urge that the specimens so necessary for illustration are not to be had without going to the country, and that takes too much time. The trouble with most of these is that they are mentally too lazy to study the technical terms which lie at the very foundation of any of these branches, and which are required in description and elucidation.

With these thoughts in mind it was determined to notice what objects of natural history might be seen in an hour's drive one afternoon recently. The drive was taken on an entirely different mission, and the objects seen ob-truded themselves, unsought upon the attention.

The first living thing appeared upon the desk as preparations were being made to start. It was nothing but a cockroach, but even a cockroach good for a "starter." To begin with, it was strange that this little insect should be abroad in daylight, as it is exclusively a nocturnal insect, and easily fright-ened back to its hole upon the approach of light. It is a very curious thing how animals of certain kinds increase the limits of their original homes. Those which do so are always such as are cunning in evading their natural enemies. Cockroaches escape by virtue of their ability to run swiftly. They are sprinters, all of them, and can easily distance on foot nearly every insect of their size and weight.

They are said to have come here from Asia, their natural home. From thence, also, they spread over Enrope. We have a species of cockroaches in our own ountry, but they are well-behaved, know their places, and stay in it. live in the woods, under dead wood and leaves, and never come to our houses to be pests like the eastern ones. The name of the common cockroach indicates its origin. It is called blatta orientalis, or eastern bug.

The blatta is an assisted emigrant. They came to us in ships' cargoes, and are in some houses a terrible pest. They feed indiscriminately upon animal and vegetable matter, and will even destroy clothing, leather, wool, and cotton. Alclothing, leather, woo, though they have an omnivorous appetite, there are some things which agree with them, and, seeming to be no respecter of food, their downfall lies in their appetite, as in many of their human neighbors. A mixture of red lead, corn meal, and molasses made into a batter and placed near their haunts will soon rid a house of them, as they eat greedily of the feast, which causes speedy death. Borax is especially obnoxious to the blatta, and it is said they will leave a place where it is sprinkled.

While speculating upon the great distance the cockroach was from home, a little insect ran swiftly across the desk. Its name, means "silver fish." It is the little silvery insect so often seen about the edges of carpet and in musty places. It has for a long time been considered harmless, but lately is accused of eating other matter which contains paste, of

In walking from the office to the upon the sidewalk-a dragon-fly and a beautiful beetle, known as the caterpillar hunter. Both are of great use to she was outwitted .- Cor. New York man, and it was with regret that their death was noted.

Everybody is familiar with the dragon fly, snake-feeder, devil's darning-needle. or whatever name it may be called. It has a large head ornamented by immense eyes, and armed with a powerful pair of jaws. Closely following are the two pairs of wings projecting stiffly at right angles with the body, dry, harsh, and rustling, but lace-like in their transparent beauty.

Then follows the long pointed body striped with green and ornamented at the extremity with two feather-like ap-endages.

They fly for hours over and about ponds, wheeling or sailing, or hovering nearly motionless in one spot. They are indeed beautiful.

Their food consists entirely of insects which they catch and devour. It is hard to compute the number of gnats, mosquitoes, and flies one single dragon fly can devour in one summer day. They are perfectly harmless to man, and entirely undeserving the relentless pur-suit with towel or broom when one by chance enters the room in quest of mosquitoes or flies. One dragon fly will rid a room of mosquitoes in half an hour if left to his own device, and it will pay anyone not to kill a hapless wanderer which strays into his house, and whose greatest desire is not to frighten the fimid inmates, but to escape to the woods, brooks, and ponds, there to kill and devour what is man's enemy and dragon's food. The other insect found dead is not behind this one in well doing. The caterpillar-hunter is a little larger than a June bug, flatter in the body, and with

This is a swift runner, living largely upon trees, over which it rapidly moves seeking larvæ and those little green worms which do so much damage to vegetation. It is probably no exaggeration to say that one beetle will kill a quart of slugs and worms in a season. The limits of space forbid the relating of a journey but only commenced, but it is enough for illustration of the fact that one need not go far for specimens, and that lack of opportunity is not the real cause of failure to pursue a study of this kind.

During the hour's drive there were seen eight different species of animals, eleven kinds of birds, four of fishes, and enough insects with which to keep one eudgeling his brain to become acquainted, and some of which, if he knew too intimately, might cause him to cease cudgeling his brain and pay regard to his body.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Last of the Buffalo.

Many of the exchanges have recently published articles concerning the do mesticating of the buffalo, or crossing it with our cattle and using them for beef. Indeed, we are not certain but articles of the kind have found their way into the columns of clippings in the Stock-growers' Journal, but we suppose no practical man ever thought seriously about such a scheme. In the first place, there is no source from which to draw our supply of buffalo from which to breed, and in the next place it is not known that the breeds will mix. The day of the buffalo is gone. His bones bleach on the plains from the Rio Grande to the Saskatchawan, and after allowing and indulging in the indiscriminate slaughter until the species is so nearly extinct, it is too late to try to make use of him. Where once countless millions of the noblest wild animals that ever trod the earth roamed at will, furnish ing food for Indians and ravenous beasts, now not one single large herd can be found. Like the Indian, the buffalo will not flourish when domesticated. The boundless plains were his home but the pale face with insatiate greed and improved firearms invaded realms of the buffalo and wantonly swept from existence the magnificent We can not now recall him. animal. He and the frontier are no more. Like the trapper, the flat-boatman and scout, he has been swept from earth by advancing civilization, and the dogie of the pale face browses where once he was wont to roam and the flesh of the white man's cow is issued from the agency to the noble red man in lieu of the buffalo hump which the red man a few years ago might go out and get for himself.
The well-greased tent-cloth, the soldier's old pants and discarded boots, now shield the dirty hide of the Indian from blasts which formerly had the buffale obe to content with. There are a few scattering herds buffalo now on the plains, but there i not known to be a single large herd in existence, and when even a dozen animals are heard of, more than twice that number of soldiers, hunters, adventurers and Indians are at once on their trail and they are slaughtered as wantonly as a few years ago.

The buffalo is gone, and whose expects to see buffalo meat quoted in the market is not wise; and he who wears a buffalo coat henceforth will pay many shekels for the same. - Northwestern (Miles City, M. T.) Stock Growers Journal.

Anecdotes of Mrs. Stowe.

Miss Catherine E. Beecher, in the last years of her life, was pleased to dwell on the renown of her more gifted sister, Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. She related the following anecdotes of her: Mrs. Stowe had agreed to give a lecture in Jacksonville, Fla., for some charity. The morning of the day it was to be delivered she was working in her gar-den several miles from that city when suddenly remembering her engagement she bailed a farmer driving to town with a load of vegetables, and went on her way in a calico dress and hands soiled with her occupation. Once in the city, she asked permission at a hotel to make her toilet before going to the lecture-room. She was informed that there was but one vacant room, and that was for Mrs. Stowe. Her asseverations that she was the person in ques-tion had to be verified before she obtained her request, When Mrs. Stowe was in England Queen Victoria sent her word that on a certain day she would be pleased to see the author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Mrs. Stowe replied friend of Mrs. Stowe-to make the necessary arrangement for an observation. There was to be a pageant of some kind that day, in which the queer would take part, passing the hotel where Mrs. Stowe was residing, and the bindings of books and labels or any the royal messenger had agreed to place her hand on the author's left shoulder which, like the cockroach, it is very to distinguish her from those with her on the balcony as the procession passed So Queen Victoria and the distinstable, two more insects were seen dead guished American gazed at each other for a few moments in silent recognition, but Mrs. Stowe was not pleased that

A. E. STEPHENSON, CHARLESTOWN. O.,

Offers to the people of Portage County the fol-lowing unexcelled Varieties, which have inva-riably received the higeest commendations wherever exhibited taking the First Premiums in every competitive test as to Hardiness, Size, Flavor, and Protific Bearing. WHITE ANN ARBOR GRAPE-Hardy, pro lific, large and delicious. Ripens ten days or two weeks before the Concord. Never mildews nor rots. Second size, one year old, small, 50 cents each.

cents each,

We, the undersigned, having been appointed by the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Washtenaw Co, Michigan, to act as Judges in the Pomological Department at their Fair in October, 1882, haf under consideration 29 varieties of Grapes, and it was their decided opinion that the "White Ann Arbor" seedling was far the most desirable of the lot.

For size flavor and beauty, it took the lead of all our standard varieties, and we believe it will yet become one of the most popular Grapes in this country.
